I was going to quote the Lisa Stansfield song “All around the world” for this advert.

Until I saw it was recorded in 1989, and I felt super old.

The point was this role involves project managing a Forum and exhibition programme hitting Dallas, Copenhagen and Bangkok.

Around the world etc.

OK, I'll move on.

The point being, you love going to far away locations, but not all the time.

You'll spend a week in each of these locations, but only once a year during the show, not every month.

You also want to run the whole damn thing yourself. Not report into a boss who takes all the glory whilst you do the grunt work.

Sound familiar?

You've got a strategic head on your shoulders, but you can't really use it where you are now and that annoys you doesn't it.

You've been keeping an eye out for something different, something that challenges you each year whilst also not being so complicated that it gives you a headache.

You know the B2B landscape like the back of your hand, you've dealt with C-suite forever and you know how they think, plus you thrive on being the person in the room when all the big decisions are being made.

Well hopefully you do.

As here you'll have full autonomy to run the account the account your way.

Nobody peaking over your shoulder, nobody telling you what to do.

Sure, there's a great support function behind you, but they're there when you need them. As your support not your shadow.

You'll be the one representing the agency at SOW meetings, you'll be the one managing temperature check sessions with the C-suite and you'll be the one overseeing the entire programme from end to end.

So, if it's time for you to be the one, rather than the number two, drop me a message and let's have a confidential chat.

Who knows where it will take you.

Don't worry if your CV isn't up to date, we can deal with that later.

Oh, I also run a £1k recommend a friend scheme, so please feel free to share with your connections.
